Celebrate India in Mexico

Celebrating India in Mexico

46th Cervantino International Festival 2018

With an introduction by Muktesh K. Pardeshi

India participated as the ‘Guest of Honour’ Country at the 46th Cervantino International Festival in Guanajuato, Mexico in October 2018.

The Cervantino Festival is the biggest and most prestigious cultural event in the Latin American region.

Though India has been participating regularly since 1979, this was the first time that it made its mark as the theme country. A spectacular display of India’s composite cultural heritage at the Festival was the hallmark of the year 2018.

The Future is Today

With this idea, the theme - ‘The Future is Today’ was chosen for 2018 edition of Cervantino.

The Future depends on what you do today. This was said by the great leader of India, Mahatma Gandhi. Each of our actions, however small, has an impact on tomorrow.

The future is not something distant and intangible; rather, we build it every day. With this idea, the theme - ‘The Future is Today’ was chosen for 2018 edition of Cervantino.

The Embassy of India in association with the Gurudev Tagore Indian Cultural Centre in Mexico City, designed the logo for India’s participation as the Guest of Honour Country in the 46th Cervantino International Festival, 2018.

The logo is inspired by the Indian national flag. It consists of a peacock- the national bird of India, perched on a Chakra (the wheel) with 24 spokes. The Chakra symbolises righteousness and constant progress. The peacock is a celebrated bird in the Indian mythology. It symbolises grace, beauty, joy and love. It is known to dance when it rains, which signifies the importance of performing arts of dance and music in Indian culture. The colours of the logo symbolise the values of love, peace, prosperity and the composite cultural heritage of India. The peacock on the wheel represents the importance accorded to the art of music and dance in the constant forward movement that heralds progress and repels stagnation of the Indian civilization.

The future depends on what you do today. This was said by the great leader of India, Mahatma Gandhi. Each of our actions, however, small, has an impact on tomorrow. The future is not something distant and intangible, rather, we build it every day. With this idea, the theme - ‘The Future is Today’, was chosen for 2018 edition of Cervantino.
Shiva and Parvati:
the woman who is my wife and I ask you for nothing, nothing that comes from the other world:
only the light on the sea,
the barefoot light on the sleeping land and sea.

- Octavio Paz, In Light of India, 1995
India participated as the “Guest of Honour” Country at the 46th Cervantino International Festival in Guanajuato, Mexico in October 2018.

The Cervantino Festival is the biggest and most prestigious cultural event in the Latin American region.

Though India has been participating regularly since 1979, this was the first time that it made its mark as the theme country. A spectacular display of India’s composite cultural heritage at the Festival was the hallmark of the year 2018.
India and Mexico are amongst the largest democracies and emerging economies of the world today. They are also amongst the oldest civilizations in the world.

Historians trace encounters between India and Mexico (then known as New Spain) to the discovery of the Philippines in the 16th century. The galleons used for trade, which were called the Nao of China, linked Acapulco and Manila for 250 years (1565-1815) through a trade route that commercially connected the Philippines, China, Japan, Mexico, Spain and, collaterally, Peru and India. Apart from cotton, these galleons carried spices, silk and religious figures made of ivory and sandalwood. This trans-Pacific trade, therefore, influenced a multitude of social factors including food habits, dress styles, artistic forms and architectural style.

An interesting example is that of different varieties of Mexican chillies being taken to Goa via the Philippines, thus becoming a basic ingredient in Indian cooking. Similarly, it was found that Portuguese merchants would buy clothes from Surat and bring them to Macao on the way to Manila. Historians claim that the Mexican red kerchief used in coastal areas known as paliakate supposedly came from Calicut in Kerala.

The Manila galleon trade also led to human consequences. By the early decades of the 19th century, there had emerged the personage of the Indian Princess Meera alias Catharina de San Juan alias ‘la China Poblana’ in the city of Puebla, thanks to the works of Pueblan historian Antonio Carrion. The origin of the folkloric dress called ‘China Poblana’ is attributed to the mysterious personality of Meera, a princess born in India, who arrived in Mexico as a slave in the 17th century, as had numerous other Asian slaves. It may be mentioned here that the term ‘China’ does not specifically refer to continental China, but to the Orient.

The history of Catharina de San Juan is directly connected with the phenomenon of slavery. Meera, according to her own accounts, was baptised in Cochin by a Jesuit priest with the name Catharina de San Juan. While she did not remember the place of origins except that it belonged to Mughal-governed territories, the Kingdom of Mogo or Mogor is mentioned in the archives. After her stay in Cochin, her captors took her to different ports and finally to Manila. Ever since Meera was brought to New Spain in 1621, she lived in Puebla and died in 1688. The information on her is based on three hagiographic accounts published during 1688-1692 by Jesuit priests.
The legend of Meera is a story of unyielding spirit and symbolises an early encounter between New Spain and India. From a cultural perspective, this historic episode had influences on various cultural phenomena, including dress styles and food habits.

The war for Mexico’s independence began on 16 September 1810. By 1815, the Manila galleon trade which had lasted for 250 years under Spanish rule came to a close and with that, the colonial contacts between India and Mexico also came to an end.

It would take another century for interest in India to be revived. The study of India began in Mexico with Jose Vasconcelos’s Estudios Indostanicos, published in 1919 in San Diego. He developed a great admiration for India. In the Prologue of his book, he wrote that “all contemporary thought should go to India in search of the essential ideas which great spirits there have worked on”. This was the first time that someone was introducing Indian philosophy to Mexican readers in Spanish. Later during his two tenures as Education Minister and Rector of the National Autonomous University of Mexico, his interest in India became well known; he introduced Mahatma Gandhi and Tagore, and stories of the Panchatantra and Indian epics, the Ramayana and Mahabharata, into the Mexican education system.

In the beginning of the 20th century, an interesting cultural case of Sikh-Mexican matrimonial alliances was witnessed in the United States of America. The Punjabi Mexican American community, the majority of which is now based in Yuba City, California, is a distinctive cultural phenomenon having its roots in a migration pattern that occurred almost a century ago. For decades in the early 20th century, Punjabi farming families sent their sons out of Punjab to earn livelihood.
Intending to return to the Punjab, only a handful of men brought their wives and families. In the United States, however, due to changed immigration laws, it was not possible for the families of Punjabi workers to join them. Almost one million Mexican immigrants began entering the US in the 1910s, shortly after the Mexican Revolution, with a large percentage arriving in families. Punjabi men married Mexican women workers and there were eventually almost four hundred of these couples clustered in California’s agricultural valley. A great number of Sikh men entered the US through various routes including through Mexico. Many of them settled in Mexicali and some in Ciudad Obregon, Sonora. Most of them, subsequently, shifted to the US.

Before India’s independence, some Indian freedom fighters had looked towards Mexico for refuge during the 2nd-3rd decades of the 20th century. Indian nationalist and revolutionary M. N. Roy (1887-1954) had fled to Mexico with his wife in June 1917, and though he spent only two years and a half in Mexico, he cherished the memories of the sojourn with great fondness. The then Mexican President Venustiano Carranza and other liberal thinkers appreciated Roy's writings for El Pueblo. The Socialist Party he founded in December 1917 was converted into the Communist Party of Mexico in 1919, the first Communist Party outside Soviet Union.

Pandurang Khankhoje (1884 –1967) was another Indian revolutionary and agricultural scientist who had made Mexico his home. At some time in the first decade of the 1900s, Khankhoje left India on a voyage that ultimately saw him settle down in the United States. His earliest nationalist work dates back to the time around 1908 when he, along with Pandit Kanshi Ram, founded the Indian Independence League in Portland, Oregon. He later moved to Mexico in 1923, where he became the Professor of Botany and Crop Breeding in the National School of Agriculture of Mexico. He led the Mexican corn breeding programme and was appointed director of the Mexican Government’s department of Agriculture. He was naturalised as a Mexican citizen in 1932 and dedicatedly worked on forging links between the two countries. He carried a personal message of goodwill from Mexican President Miguel Aleman Valdes to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in August 1949. Finally, he returned to India in 1955, after having spent more than 30 years in his adoptive country.
In the diplomatic realm, Mexico was the first Latin American nation to recognise India immediately after its Independence in 1947 and formal relations were established in 1950. During the last 70 years, friendship and cooperation between the two nations have grown steadily.

Among the Mexican people, there is wide general awareness, keen interest and regard for Indian culture, social values and her pluralistic democracy. India’s recent achievements in the economic, educational, scientific and technological fields are greatly admired. Indian personalities such as Mahatma Gandhi, Nehru, Tagore and Mother Teresa are widely admired. Mahatma Gandhi’s statues and busts adorn major Mexican cities; major avenues and several educational institutions are named after him. The writings of Nobel-laureate and Indophile Octavio Paz, who was Mexican Ambassador to India in the 1960s, on his long experiences in India have had a profound impact in Mexico. On the other hand, Mexican mural art deeply influenced the works of Satish Gujral, artist and architect, who studied in Mexico in early 1950s under Diego Rivera and David Alfaro Siqueiros. He was the first Indian recipient of a Mexican scholarship and became a great admirer of Mexican muralism and after returning to India in 1954, his name became synonymous with muralism.

From the very beginning of diplomatic relations, there has been a special emphasis on the promotion of mutual awareness about each other’s culture. For instance, during the visit of President Adolfo Lopez Mateos to India in 1962, an agreement was signed for the publication of an anthology of Indian literature in Mexico. Likewise, works of various Mexican authors were to be translated into major Indian languages.

One of the early agreements between two countries relates to cultural exchanges. The Agreement on Cultural Cooperation has been in existence since 1975 and these activities are carried out through four-yearly ‘Programmes of Cultural Cooperation’ under the framework of this Agreement. The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) offers scholarships to Mexicans every year, while leading Mexican institutions such as El Colegio de Mexico, whose Centre for Asian and African Studies was founded in 1964, and the National Autonomous University of Mexico, both have centres of Indian studies. El Colegio has also hosted Chairs in Indian Studies in the past in collaboration with ICCR. In 1993-94, a centre of Bharatiya Vidya Bhavan was established which unfortunately closed down within a few years.

In recent times, the Gurudev Tagore Indian Cultural Centre (GTICC) has been the pillar of India’s cultural diplomacy since November 2010. It functions as the cultural arm of the Embassy and plays a central role in the promotion of Indian culture in Mexico. GTICC imparts classes in eleven disciplines in areas of Indian dances, music, Yoga, languages and gastronomy.

The Festival Internacional Cervantino (FIC), popularly known as El Cervantino, is a festival which takes place each fall in the city of Guanajuato, a lively and colourful city located in central Mexico. Guanajuato is the name of a rocky highland state of Mexico as well as its Capital city. In colonial times, mineral resources attracted Spanish prospectors to mine for silver, gold and other minerals. For two centuries, the state produced up to 40% of world’s silver. The city of Guanajuato is an extraordinary city, which was declared a UNESCO World Heritage City in 1988. It was founded in 1540s due to rich silver and gold deposits. Mine owners studded Guanajuato’s narrow twisting streets and charming plazas with imposing churches and mansions. The city boasts of an ingenuous tunnel network to help overcome its unique geography.

In 1953, Enrique Ruelas of the University of Guanajuato began to put on an annual event called the Entremeses de Miguel de Cervantes, short plays written by the author of Don Quixote. These plays are still part of the annual Festival. In 1972, he founded the Coloquio Cervantino from June to September to expand the annual Entremeses event. Ruelas’s efforts came to the attention of the federal government. Around the same time, former President Luis Echeverria had attended cultural festivals in Europe and was interested in doing something similar in Mexico. The Mexican Government then established a Foundation for an international cultural festival, originally proposing it for Acapulco. However, the tradition of the Entremeses was the main reason why Guanajuato was eventually chosen, meshing the two ideas to produce the modern event for the first time in 1972 with performances by artistes from fourteen countries including Mexico. Since then, FIC has grown to become the most important international artistic and cultural event in Mexico and Latin America, and one of four major events of its type in the world. The events take place in multiple theatres, plazas and other venues in the city, with satellite events in other plazas in the state and other cities in the country. The event represents a major tourist attraction for the city.

India has been participating regularly in Cervantino Festival since 1979. Dr. Sonal Mansingh, who was the first Indian artiste to represent India at the Festival, fondly recalls her experience at Cervantino Festival in the following words:

“I vividly remember my Mexico experience. I was dancing at the Cervantino International Festival, held in one of Mexico’s most colourful and lively cities, Guanajuato. It was an open-air space in a large plaza that could house stadium-sized crowds. I was inundated with felicitations. A group of Mexican peasants wearing “sombrero” hats also came forward. They had tears in their eyes, as they sat on their knees to kiss my hands. Speaking to me in native dialects in voices cracking with emotion, they said that “they saw Jesus as I danced”. One of the organisers told me that this group was the loudest in their catcalls during the items preceding my presentation”. (Sujata Prasad, A Life like No Other, 2017)

Personally, I had heard of the Cervantino Festival during my first, though brief, stay in Mexico in the early 1990s. Naturally, I was hopeful of expanding India’s presence at the Festival when I returned to Mexico as India’s Ambassador in April 2016. I met the Director General of the Festival, Mr. Jorge Volpi, on 26 August 2016 in his office to discuss our cultural collaboration, where he was very warm and forthcoming. During the conversation, he mentioned that he would be completing his term with Cervantino by the end of 2016 and that he had a dream to see India as the theme country some day at the Festival. That day I pondered over what Mr. Volpi had hinted at and thus the idea for India’s special participation was born.

Over the next two months, we collected requisite information about the Festival and implications for the Guest of Honour Country in order to make a bid. By the end of October 2016, we had made a proposal to the Director General of ICCR, New Delhi. Ambassador Amarendra Khatua, who was then heading ICCR, had known about the Festival as he had also done a posting in Mexico in the 1990s and was persuaded quickly. In January 2017, I wrote to the Mexican Minister of Culture, expressing India’s keen interest in being the Guest of Honour Country the following year and was told of the Mexican side’s positive response in April. It was now time to initiate preparations: we had 18 months to go for India’s biggest cultural show in the Hispanic world.

The 46th Festival was inaugurated on 10 October by Ms. Maria Cristina Garcia Cepeda, Minister of Culture of Mexico in the presence of Governors of Guanajuato and Aguascalientes with great fanfare at Teatro Juarez. Representing India, the Director General of ICCR, Mrs. Riva Ganguly Das, and I were present.

The inaugural show, A Passage to Bollywood, choreographed by Ashley Lobo, captivated the main plaza of Guanajuato with the scintillating presentation of a ‘movie on a stage’. In the moving lanes of Guanajuato, I witnessed amongst Mexican audience a great fondness and affinity for India’s cultural manifestations. India won many Mexican hearts. With 122 events, spread over 32 cities besides Guanajuato, this was the biggest cultural outreach of India in Mexico or for that matter, in any country in the Latin American region.

Apart from a variety of performing arts such as classical, folk and contemporary dances; classical, folk, devotional and fusion music; theatre and puppetry, India’s participation also consisted of a food festival, film shows, Yoga demonstrations, exhibitions (textiles, dolls and photographs), workshops and a series of academic conferences. In order to promote Brand India, a ‘House of India’ was set up with the help of Indian business establishments. El Financiero, the leading Mexican daily, brought out a Special Supplement on the occasion.

As a tribute to the people of the World Heritage City, we donated a bust of Mahatma Gandhi to the Municipality of Guanajuato. This was unveiled at Jardin Reforma in April 2019 in commemoration of the 150th Birth Anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi.
At a time when India is developing a structured approach to cultural diplomacy, India’s special participation at the Cervantino Festival in 2018, followed by its participation as a theme country at International Book Fair Guadalajara 2019 may be treated as two of the most important long-term elements in its cultural relationship with Mexico. I take pride in saying that we are at the finest moment of cultural diplomacy in Mexico. It is time to have a permanent exhibition on India at Mexico’s National Museum of World Cultures to cement enduring cultural bonds between two “Privileged Partners”.

Our enhanced cultural presence is buttressed by overall expansion in bilateral ties, including surge in trade and investment relations. By the time India concluded its special participation at the Cervantino, bilateral trade by the end of 2018 had soared to USD 10.15 billion for the first time. Mexico is now the biggest trade partner of India in the Latin American region and India the 9th amongst Mexico’s global trade partners. It is very heartening to see that India’s economic and cultural diplomacy are complementing each other - this augurs well for India-Mexico friendship. As they say in Mexico - ¡Viva India! ¡Viva Mexico!

India’s cultural and literary presence in Mexico would be further reinforced this year (2019) through the International Book Fair Guadalajara, where India has been invited to participate as the ‘Guest of Honour’ country. I was privileged to receive the baton from the Hon. Prime Minister of Portugal, Antonio Costa on 2 December 2018. In this connection, the National Book Trust of India (NBT) and Feria Internacional del Libro de Guadalajara had signed a MoU in July 2018.
I am delighted that the Indian Council for Cultural Relations participated in the 46th edition of the Cervantino Festival as the Guest of Honour country. I was privileged to attend the opening ceremony at Guanajuato in the presence of several Mexican dignitaries including the Minister for Culture and Governors of Guanajuato and Aguascalientes.

As DG, ICCR, my intent was to showcase the best of Indian art and music at Cervantino. Top class artistes representing diverse forms of performing arts participated in the festival. As many as ten cultural groups comprising of 112 artistes enthralled Mexican audiences from 10 – 28 October 2018.

I am confident that our participation has resulted in strengthening of our relationship and greater people to people contact between India and Mexico.

Riva Ganguly Das

The Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) was founded in 1950 by Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, independent India’s first Education Minister. Its objectives are to actively participate in the formulation and implementation of policies and programmes pertaining to India’s external cultural relations; to foster and strengthen cultural relations and mutual understanding between India and other countries; to promote cultural exchanges with other countries and people; and to develop relations with nations.

The Council addresses its mandate of cultural diplomacy through a broad range of activities. In addition to organising cultural festivals in India and overseas, the ICCR financially supports a number of cultural institutions across India, and sponsors individual performers in dance, music, photography, theatre, and the visual arts.

Since 2010, ICCR has been running a Cultural Centre – Gurudev Tagore Indian Cultural Centre in Mexico City.

EL FUTURO ES HOY

Logo of 46th Cervantino International Festival 2018
The Cervantino International Festival is the most important artistic and cultural activity in Mexico and in Latin America. Due to its prominence in the international arena of performing arts, it occupies a special place among the four most important festivals of its kind worldwide. It encompasses music, opera, theatre and dance, visual arts, literature and audio-visual media.

The Festival is organised every year at Guanajuato which is also its headquarters. It originated in Guanajuato, in 1953, where Enrique Ruelas performed at the assembly of the Cervantinos Entremeses as homage to Miguel de Cervantes. Its success entailed a proposal to take the Festival to the wider community and this has continued with greater success every year for more than six decades.

It brings together a significant number of international groups from different parts of the world, and also offers an important platform to its national artistes.

Diversity, universal cultural wealth and the artistic zeitgeist of today and tomorrow make the Festival remarkable. The Festival bears the stamp of the novelist, poet and dramatist, Miguel de Cervantes and his landmark creation, the ingenious Don Quixote, considered the epitome of creation of human ingenuity.

The objective of the Cervantino International Festival is not only to showcase cultural diversity of the world, but also to seek its formation, evolution and propagation.
The 46th edition of the Cervantino International Festival was a cultural extravaganza of 195 shows, including opera, music, dance, theatre, street shows, exhibitions and academic activities. 110 artistic groups from 34 countries, including Mexico, performed in 38 cities across Mexico. India was the Guest of Honour Country and Aguascalientes was the Guest of Honour state at this edition of the Festival.

The Festival showed an artistic range, rich in traditions and modernity, true to its theme, 'The Future is Today'.

The Festival included activities, discussion forums and shows that addressed issues of enormous importance: the social and geopolitical order, the care of the planet, migration, tolerance, coexistence, new technologies of communication and globalization.

The participating nations were: Germany, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia & Herzegovina, Brazil, Canada, Colombia, Chile, China, Croatia, Ecuador, Slovenia, Spain, USA, France, Georgia, Guatemala, India (Guest of Honour Country), Iran, Israel, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Monaco, the Netherlands, Peru, Puerto Rico, the United Kingdom, the Republic of Congo, Serbia, Switzerland and Zimbabwe.
Guanajuato has an inseparable link with the Cervantino International Festival. For 46 years, it has been offering its theatres, auditoriums, plazas, squares and alleys for the most incredible expressions of art and culture. Guanajuato has been welcoming visitors, artistes and performers from all over the world with the warmth that characterises the people of Mexico. The streets of Guanajuato bring together different cultures from all continents through multiple artistic expressions and create a great mosaic of universal culture every year in October.

Founded in 1540s, Guanajuato became one of the most important mining centres in New Spain (now Mexico) and a key location for the Mexican Independence movement. Guanajuato became the first silver producer in the world at the end of the 18th century, and its prosperity led to erection of stately buildings, both religious and civil, giving life to a city with intermingled elements of the two cultures in coexistence.

Guanajuato is known for its beauty, natural landscapes and culinary diversity. The beauty of its architecture is reflected in multiple colonial cities, including San Miguel de Allende and the capital city of Guanajuato. Guanajuato has many important historical sites, which live today as centres of great cultural heritage of Mexico. In the city of Guanajuato, one can discover the Circuits of Wine, Tequila and Strawberry that reveal the flavours of a generous land and the traditional dishes that smell of a fusion of Spanish culture and the indigenous. One of the unique features of the city is a network of underground tunnels that are used as roads.

Owing to its historical importance and its architectural beauty, Guanajuato has two distinctions: in 1988, it was recognised as a World Heritage Site by the UNESCO and in 2005, it was designated the Cervantina Capital of America.

The image on the left page is a work of Alonso Leon Jaime. This image was used for the commemorative celebrations of the 277th anniversary of Guanajuato City.
Danceworx
A Passage to Bollywood: A Movie on Stage
The Danceworx Academy was set up by Indian-Australian choreographer, Ashley Lobo in November 1998. With its repertoire of Jazz, Classical Ballet, and contemporary dance, the group has built a huge fan base in India.

The Danceworx’s Navdhara, India Dance Theatre, is inspired by Bollywood stories and choreographed by Ashley Lobo. He introduced Western techniques to India, developing his own method that uses a unique awareness approach that explores movements through breathing, Yoga and physical contact.

The Group

The Performance

Danceworx presented a Bollywood-style story, ‘A passage to Bollywood’ which inaugurated the artistic activities at the Cervantino International Festival, 2018. The show gave the audiences an experience of a movie on stage. It narrated the lives of two young people who travel to Mumbai to achieve success. The dancers portrayed the life, philosophy and culture of India through a fusion of Indian and Western dance styles.

Malavika Sarukkai
A tribute to Sari, the traditional garment that identifies the women of India
For three decades, Malavika Sarukkai has been a hallmark dancer and choreographer in the traditional Bharatanatyam style. She has been performing on stage since the age of twelve for diverse audiences throughout the world.

A firm believer in the continuity of Indian classical tradition, Ms. Sarukkai preserves key elements of Bharatanatyam while providing a personal interpretation of its cultural significance. She inspired the phrase “innovative-within-tradition”, to describe her stimulating dances. Malavika Sarukkai has received several awards, including Padma Shri from the President of India in 2003 and Sangeet Natak Akademi Award in 2002.

Malavika Sarukkai presented Thari-the Loom, a choreographic concept of dance inspired by the loom, with the design and play of the thread. The work of the dancer explored the interaction of the constant and the variable; and the eternal and the changing.

The staging of Sarukkai explored the artistic relationship between the dancer and the weaver, giving rise to a dynamic web in which both elements come together in a harmonic sense.

Adishakti
A play interpreting recurring cycle of creation, celebration and destruction
The Group

Adishakti was created as a theatre company in Mumbai in 1981 by choreographer Veenapani Chawla. It has performed on many popular plays like Sophocles’ Oedipus (1981), Stoppard’s Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead (1983), and Euripides’ Trojan Women (1984).

In 1983, Adishakti started to include research as a part of its activities. It evolved due to its need to create a new language for contemporary performance. In 1989, Adishakti rechristened itself as Adishakti Laboratory for Theatre Art Research to have a pan-India appeal.

The Performance

The group presented its production, Ganapati, in harmony with the theme of the Festival: ‘The Future is Today’. The performance highlighted the journey of India towards the future.

Composed of seven episodes, the performance highlighted verbal expressions supported by gestures, koodiyattam music and popular rhythms. It depicted the cycle of creation, celebration and destruction.

Meher The Troupe
A celebration of life of Swami Vivekananda through puppetry
The Group

Meher The Troupe is made up of a diverse group of performers, who share a deep love for puppets. It engages in theatrical performance with puppets of various types (shadow theatre, hand puppets, two-legged puppets, three-dimensional puppets etc.). The company is directed by Mansinh Zala, and was integrated as a way to pay tribute to Meher Contractor (1918-1992), an Indian artiste, puppeteer, director, teacher and an essential figure in the art of the puppetry in India.

Mansinh Zala placed India on the international stage in the art of puppetry. The Troupe focuses on promoting social welfare, education, development and communication.

The Performance

Meher The Troupe transmitted the teachings of Swami Vivekananda, thinker, mystic and a spiritual leader of India. The play was called “Life as long as a dream”, whose main characters were dolls and puppets.

The puppets took the spectators to the life of Swami Vivekananda. It recounted various passages of the life of Swami Vivekananda, and employed the ‘Black Theatre’ technique, which uses contrasting display of light and shadow to highlight the characters.

Margi
An artistic and poetic confluence of the Occidental and the Oriental
The Group

Margi is a theatrical group that was established in 1969 as a school of Kathakali and Kutiyattam, a Sanskrit drama. It is one of the most important institutions of performing arts in India. It has toured Sweden, Japan, Germany, France, Sri Lanka and Spain.

In 2002, it was selected by the Indian Council for Cultural Relations (ICCR) to carry out the most extensive Kathakali tour in Europe. It is also a research centre in which actors, famous writers, literary critics and erudite professors from different areas collaborate.

The Performance

In this India-Spain co-production, the group presented a drama on Cervantes’ renowned work, Don Quixote, in the dance form of Kathakali. The artistes combined traditional Kathakali with Western theatre techniques. The performance compared and contrasted the character of Don Quixote with a character of the Puranas, the ancient Indian religious text.

Octavio Paz resided in New Delhi in two spells - first in the 1950's and second from 1962 to 1968 as Mexico’s Ambassador to India. His stay profoundly influenced both the way of understanding his country and himself, when he "discovered his soul".

"It was a happy period: I could read, write several books of poetry and prose, have a few friends who were joined by ethical, aesthetic and intellectual affinities, travel unknown cities in the heart of Asia, witness strange customs and contemplate monuments and landscapes and above all, I met my wife, Marie Jose, and married her under a neem tree in the garden of the Mexican embassy, a bungalow located at 13, Prithviraj Road, which meant for me 'a second birth' "...

Vislumbres de la India (1995)
Indian and Mexican civilizations show similarities while maintaining their distinctiveness. This intriguing comparison of the two civilizations was presented by a dance drama, "Un Diálogo: India y Mexico". It was inspired by "Vislumbres de la India", a work of the celebrated Mexican writer, diplomat and Nobel-laureate, Octavio Paz.

The play was an Indo-Mexican production created by Jose Luis Cruz. It was a fusion of dance, music and painting, interspersed with dialogues between Mexico and India and tempered with the prose of Octavio Paz.

About Jose Luis Cruz

Jose Luis Cruz has origins in Tapachula, Chiapas and he studied at the National School of Theatre of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). His plays are adapted from the Accidental Death of an Anarchist, by the 1997 Nobel Prize winner for literature, Dario Fo and the Baal, by Bertold Brecht.

In 2004, the International Institute of UNESCO and the Mexican Centre of Theatre (ITI) gave him "My Life in Theatre" Medal, in recognition of his illustrious career.

Letter from Ambassador Muktesh K. Pardeshi to Mexican Minister of Culture

Ciudad de México a 11 de enero de 2017

Su Excelencia,

Tomo esta oportunidad para felicitarla en su nombramiento como nueva Secretaria de Cultura. Su vasta experiencia en la promoción y fortalecimiento de la cultura en México, dará un impulso aún mayor en la preservación y difusión de la riqueza cultural que tiene este país.

La India y México comparten una relación cálida y cordial a través de sus raíces culturales. Es por ello que la India ha buscado trasmitir en México, el conocimiento de las expresiones culturales de la India, a través de su participación en el Festival Internacional Cervantino en los últimos años, en donde se nos ha propuesto participar como País Invitado, en la edición 2018 de este Festival.

Asimismo, quisiera informarle que el Gobierno de la India envió en el año 2000, 108 piezas de exhibición al Museo Nacional de las Culturas, con la idea de instalar una “Sala de la India”. No obstante, esta sala de exhibición no ha sido todavía instalada, y las 108 piezas han estado resguardadas por los últimos 16 años, por lo que atentamente le pido su amable intervención para lograr concretizar esta “Sala de la India”.

Por lo anterior, le expreso mi interés de poder realizarle una visita de cortesía, en la fecha más conveniente para usted, para dialogar y obtener su orientación para esta propuesta y así promover la relación cultural entre los dos países.

Agradezco su amable atención y hago propicia la oportunidad para reiterarle Excelencia, las seguridades de mi más alta y distinguida consideración.

(Muktesh K. Pardeshi)

India participated as the ‘Guest of Honour’ Country at the 46th Cervantino International Festival in Guanajuato, Mexico in October 2018.

The Cervantino Festival is the biggest and most prestigious cultural event in the Latin American region.

Though India has been participating regularly since 1979, this was the first time that it made its mark as the theme country. A spectacular display of India’s composite cultural heritage at the Festival was the hallmark of the year 2018.

The Future is Today
El futuro es hoy

The future depends on what you do today. This was said by the great leader of India, Mahatma Gandhi. Each of our actions, however small, has an impact on tomorrow.

The future is not something distant and intangible, rather, we build it every day. With this idea, the theme - ‘The Future is Today’ was chosen for 2018 edition of Cervantino.
